We are again confronted by complaints from our Casky subscribers that the South Kentuckian does not reach Casky on the day of publication. There is never a time when the mail is not put in the office here two hours or more before train time and we have assurances from the post master here that the bundle is always mailed and forwarded with the other south bound mail. What becomes of it after it gets into the hands of the L. & N. route agents is the question. It is sometimes carried up and down the road for days before it is delivered and often comes from the opposite end of the road. Our subscribers blame us for these irregularities when the truth is we do not fail to mail our papers once a year on an average. It is an outrage on the public that such officials are retained by the Louisville & Nashville railroad company.

Assuming that the school-children represent one fifth of the population of Hopkinsville, the city has 7,180 inhabitants.

Mr. R. M. Woodruff has taken the agency for the Union Fire Insurance Company. His headquarters will be at Jno. T. Wright & Co's.

A freight train was wrecked near Nortonville Friday, and the passenger trains were delayed several hours. Ten cars were thrown into a ditch but no one was injured.

Maj. J. O. Ferrell's school closed last Friday. The session has been a very successful one, and we are glad to know that Maj. Ferrell's outlook for the future is exceedingly flattering.

Julius Uncle, made another unsuccessful attempt at suicide last week. He cut his wrist and tried to bleed to death but did not succeed. He has tried to kill himself several times. If he really wants to die we would advise him to twist the tail of a mule or blow into an unloaded gun.

Mr. R. H. Markham is announced as a candidate for constable in the Hopkinsville district. Mr. Markham is well-known to most of the voters of the city and should be elected he would doubtless make a faithful and energetic officer.

The Public Schools will close for the summer next Friday. The regular quarterly examinations are under way now and will continue throughout the week. There will be public exercises to close with, as regular work will continue up to the last day. The schools will re-open on the first Monday of next September.

Mr. H. C. Herndon stood his examining trial for shooting at Squire Bell, col., before Esquires Major and Garrott, Longview, Saturday, and was held under a bond of $500 to await the action of the grand jury. The announcement of E. W. Glass for re-election to the office of constable in the Hopkinsville district appears in to-day's paper. He is the first endorsed man ever elected to an office in the county and it must be said to his credit that he has made a capable and efficient officer, attentive to his duties and faithful in his trusts. His party will doubtless give him an endorsement.

The Mission Band of the First Presbyterian church will give a Pink Tea entertainment at the residence of Mr. Clarence Anderson, on next Friday night. Ice, cakes and other refreshments will be provided. The price of admission will be 25 cents, and the proceeds will be devoted to church purposes. Everybody is invited to attend. It will be the first Pink Tea entertainment ever given in the city, and it will undoubtedly be a pleasant affair.

By invitation of the Alumnae of Bethel Female College, Rev. J. M. Peay, of Pembroke, will deliver an address before that association, on the subject of Education, Wednesday evening, June 25th, in the Baptist church. The public is cordially invited to be present. This is a move in the right direction, and is but an evidence of the popular impulse in favor of the higher education of our women.

The Hopkinsville South Kentuckian and the New Era both speak in very high terms of the efficient management of the postoffice of that place since Mr. W. F. Handle became Assistant Postmaster. The mails are distributed promptly and correctly, the office is well conducted every way, and the community is of course, greatly pleased. A few more Randles judiciously distributed among some other postoffices in this State would be highly appreciated.—Courier Journal.

Clifton Ferrell, who returned from Vanderbilt University last week made a record as a student of which his parents may well feel proud. For several years he had been under the direct tutelage of his father, Maj. J. O. Ferrell, in his High School, and it was expected that the thorough instruction he had received in that excellent institution would materially aid him in acquiring an honorable position in College, but he has far exceeded the expectations of his friends. He was awarded a certificate of distinction in six studies, viz: Latin, Greek, English, Physics, Natural History and Mathematics. To do this it was necessary to maintain a standing four-fifths perfect during the whole session, including rigid written examinations at the close. He gained a certificate in every study. He is a young man of the very best character and his studious habits are sure to still further promote his success. He is a youth of much promise and will return in the fall and we predict that he will be on hand when the honors of his graduating class are awarded.

A GANG OF MURDERERS.

Who Killed their Victims and Hid the bodies in a cave, arrested in Montgomery county, Tenn.

A sensation was created at Clarksville, last week, by the arrest of Ransom Morrow and his two sons, Wm. and Charles, charged with all manner of crimes.

"They are charged with the murder of Jim Brown, col., in 1877 and of Dick Overton, col., in 1878. Oar readers will remember that the body of Brown was found at the time mentioned on a half burned brush pile and had been shot through with several bullets. Dick Overton mysteriously disappeared at the time he is supposed to have been killed, and a skeleton, identified as his, has recently been found in Bellamy's cave."

The Tobacco Leaf says: "It is strange that four or five men could carry on so much deviltry and fleabish murder in a civilized, religious community, as appears from the evidence and general detail of events and circumstances, for fifteen or twenty years and not to be detected. But it seems that they started with characters above reproach, and were innocently connected: Ransom Morrow, now about sixty-five years of age, a well-to-do farmer and leading member of the church; Wm. Morrow, a quiet, industrious, unobtrusive man; Charles, a modest fellow; Tom Morrow, a good citizen and not mixed up in this affair; Ben Morrow, sustaining also a good character; and Dr. Peter Bellamy, son-in-law to Ransom Morrow, the son of a distinguished minister; consequently if suspected of crime, no one dared to breathe it. In fact they were believed to be good people until after the killing of old Jim Brown, when it became settled in the public mind that these men were guilty, yet proof was not clear, and Dr. Bellamy, who was tried for the crime, was cleared by the ingenious defense of his counsel, who charged the deed on T. G. Keatts, the prosecutor in the case. Keatts was not the original prosecutor, but was forced to take the place in his own defense, Bellamy and the Morrrows charging the crime on him after it got into court. Brown had been dead five or six months before the fact came to light, or was brought into court. It is not generally known who started the prosecution, and likely never will be known. Keatts, however, after Bellamy had been tried and acquitted of the charge, the Morrrows and Bellamy began the prosecution of Keatts, but facts that they saw would be brought out induced them to withdraw the prosecution. It is now shown that they determined to kill Keatts, and while going to his house for that avowed purpose, were dissuaded by a friend from the deed. They gave Keatts notice to leave the country in three days if he valued his life. He took them at their word and left. Since then all the petty thieving, house robbery, burning and other crimes in that section pointing to these men, but people dared not breathe it, knowing Keatts' trouble and the fate of poor Tom Sly, who was shot down by Ben Morrow while hunting, accidentally, it is claimed, but with criminal intent, it is believed, because Sly knew too much and talked too freely for their comfort.

There is no recounting the crimes that have been committed in that section during the past fifteen to twenty years, that have been kept smothered up, or that were done so mysteriously that no clue to the perpetrators could be had. Strangers passing through have been misled and no further account of them was had. Some years ago the dead body of a strange peddler was found in the neighborhood, and the verdict of the Coroner's jury, as it now appears on the records in the court-house, is to the effect that an unknown man came to his death from an unknown cause. Some two years ago the residence of Mrs. Lowry, a widow, was burnt. She rebuilt but before the insurance agent could get there the new house was burnt. The residence of constable Edmundson was on fire, and it is said that Dick Overton told that the Morrrows did it. One man's tobacco barn was robbed and he tracked the mules to Ransom Morrow's stable, and said so more about it. Another man's smoke-house was robbed of all the bacon; he bought a year's supply, put it in, and that was taken. He was very sure as to where it went, but thought best to make no fuss about it. One month ago Mr. Bailey Wynn's house was broken open and a lot of bed clothing and other articles stolen. Among other things taken was a piece of new striped linen, woven by a lady in the neighborhood. Some of Dr. Bellamy's family was seen wearing the linen made into an undershirt, and it was identified by the lady who wove it. This matter was tried this week before a magistrate, but there was no evidence of the manner in which Dr. Bellamy's family got possession of it.

The scene of all this deviltry is, we regret deeply to say, in the Ninth district of Montgomery county, near Oakwood. The Morrrows all live in three-fourth to one mile of the cave where they stored away their victims."

The Chronicle says: "Confessions as to the murder of Brown and Overton were proved by Wm. Outlaw, Andrew Hambrick and Jim Peacand. The alleged excuse for killing Brown was that he had attempted to ravish Dr. Bellamy's wife, and for that of Overton, that he was caught trying to ravish a little daughter of Rans. Morrow. Peacand also testified that Rans. Morrow was sawing Dick Overton $50. That he went off to get the money and on leaving remarked to his sons that he would prefer not to find Overton there when he came back. The evidence is that Bill and Charlie Morrow carried Overton to a place near the cave where they shot him and put his body in the cave. Bill seems to have been the principal actor.

Judge Tyler refused to allow any bail, and the parties are now all confined in the county jail awaiting trial."

Entertainment.

The teachers having in charge the classes of South Ky. College, that was burned last fall, will give an entertainment at the Opera House, next Friday evening, June 13. Reserved seats without extra charge will be on sale next Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock, at Gish & Garner's drug store.

DIED.

GARROTT: At the residence of her husband, M. A. Garrott, Esq., near Longview, on Sunday, June 8, 1881, Mrs. Fannie M. Garrott, aged about 48 years. Mrs. Garrott, had long been an invalid and a great sufferer and her death was not unexpected. The burial took place at the family burying ground yesterday afternoon at 1 o'clock. Her funeral was preached by Rev. W. B. Walker, of the Baptist church.

The family have the sympathies of many friends in their bereavement.

Sev German citizens in this vicinity and in Buehler's settlement will grow in tubs samples of tobacco and cabbage for exhibition at the Louisville Exposition.

Next Sunday at 10 o'clock, A. M., German Lutheran services will be held again in Lovier's Place, Russellville street hill. A German Lutheran Sunday school will be opened as soon as the necessary books have arrived.

Mr. Henry Prumme, the German market gardener, on Russellville street hill, has planted over 2000 sweet potato slips, over 3000 plants of early and 1000 plants of late cabbage. Of the latter kind he will plant out 4000 more to supply the market and export cabbage instead of having it imported.

VACCINATION.

A Formidable Army of Statistics Testifying to Its Usefulness.

Dr. E. S. Bailey, of Chicago, read a paper before a medical meeting in that city on the subject of "Compulsory Vaccination." He said that the origin of small-pox was a mystery, as it now was purely contagious. He gave a short history of the disease, from the time of its great ravages in remote times down to the time of the introduction of vaccination by Jenner. The theory is that the system of a person inoculated with the cow-pox is subjected to the same influences as if the patient had the genuine small-pox, for the two diseases present exactly similar types. A person once vaccinated has practically permanent protection against small-pox. In the light of modern science arm-to-arm vaccination must be given up, and vaccine virus non-humanized is the only thing to be recognized. A good cicatrix should be well indented with a clearly defined edge, and an indurated cicatrix will present an ill-defined edge. In 15,000 recorded cases of small-pox, it had been found that the protection was directly in proportion to the character of the vaccination, the proportions being 2.52 per cent, where there were good cicatrices, and 8.82 per cent, where the scars were indurated in character. In England, for thirty years previous to the discovery of vaccination, the cases of small-pox averaged 3,000 to every 1,000,000, while for twenty years following there were only 252 cases to every 1,000,000. For the year ending in May last, the cases of small-pox among vaccinated patients averaged ninety-two to the million, while of unvaccinated patients the average was 9,350 to the million. In some cases noted in Norwich, England, 215 persons who had not been vaccinated were thoroughly exposed to the disease, the result being that 200 contracted small-pox and forty-six died. On the other hand ninety-one persons who had good vaccinations were as thoroughly exposed to the infection, but only two contracted the disease, and then in a modified form. In the case of medical men, who are constantly exposed, out of fifty-seven who had three or more good scars, only two contracted the disease, and out of 257 who had indurated scars, forty-four were taken with a modified form of the small-pox. As respecting the power of vaccination to modify the force and character of the disease, the English records before cited show that in unvaccinated patients the mortality averages from 20 to 43 per cent, while among the vaccinated ones the mortality is scarcely more than 7 per cent, and the average has been as low as 3 per cent. Revaccination exterminates the liability to renewed susceptibility, and the varying constitutions of mankind are reasons for the consistent practice of frequent vaccination. The speaker referred to the great success attending the rules requesting all children in the public schools to be properly vaccinated before admittance. Out of 140,000 children in attendance at the public schools of Chicago during the past six years, only seven have had the small-pox.

It was so common for Freeman to whip his wife, at Memphis, that the neighbors paid little attention to the bruises which she constantly bore. She never complained of them, and was seemingly resigned. But a few days ago a pistol shot was heard in her house, and her husband was found with a bullet in his head. "I concluded that I'd lost my life," she said, "and, Lordy sakes, wasn't he surprised when I hauled out my pistol and popped at him!"
